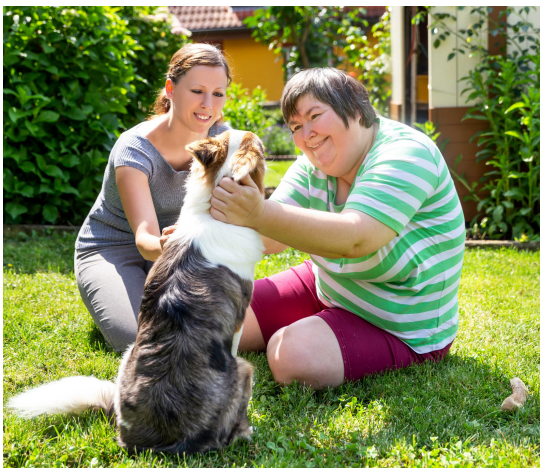
Alternative Services & Beyond: Home and Community Based Services Settings Rule

Services are evolving to better meet the needs of people with intellectual and developmental disabilities. Long before the pandemic, the federal government established the Home and Community Based Services Settings Rule (HCBS) aiming to make all disability services more person-centered. HCBS emphasizes individualization, flexibility, and choice. California is still working on applying HCBS to regional centers and service providers, and alternative services provide a glimpse into new opportunities.



Learn more about:

- How to build on alternative services to achieve the goals of HCBS
- Ways that services are adapting and changing for HCBS
- Resources about HCBS for individuals served and service providers
